SUBJECT: REDESIGN OF THEOCC.COM WEBSITE – BETA VERSION NOW AVAILABLE

As previously announced in Information Memo #45540, the OCC website is in the process of being redesigned. A beta version of the new website is now available to allow Clearing Members to become familiar with the changes. The beta site can be found at <https://prd.theocc.com>.

During the period while the beta site is available, the current site at <https://www.theocc.com> will remain the official source for all OCC data and information. The beta site is expected to replace the current site later this year. Below are the notable changes to the website. Please be advised that some functionality will only be available when the official site launches. These instances are noted within the beta site.

- The home page and all interior pages will feature a new visual design. Also, certain pages on the current site will be merged. Details on site changes are available on the Site Update Overview page.
- The navigation and site menu, as well as many page URLs, will change. Although many of the current site's URLs will automatically redirect users to the appropriate page on the new site, visitors will be encouraged to update all bookmarks, including batch processing URLs. Please see the Batch Processing Changes page for a list of new script examples. Scripts will not change from their current format until the new site formally launches.
- Certain Market Data reports will be consolidated. The Market Data section will remain a standalone section within the site's main navigation. Also, DDS and Inbound FIXML documentation will be placed in the Clearance and Settlement area of the new site.
- A System Status button will be added to the site so that visitors can quickly learn about issues that may be affecting the clearing system.
- Certain content will be removed from the site and archived, such as News published prior to 2014. After the relaunch, site visitors can send questions about accessing archived content through a Contact and Feedback form that will be made available. Information Memos will remain on the site and will not be affected by the archiving of content.

OCC will post another memo when the date for the formal launch of the new website has been determined.
